Johnson's Impeachment of Stanton.

[From the Sacramento Union.]

The President has suddenly discovered a pretext for removing Secretary Stanton. He accuses him of responsibility for the New Orleans riots. Stanton, he says, had been informed by General Baird that the riots were about to take place, and failed to apprise the President of the fact. As if conscious how weak a subterfuge this is, which he has been a year in finding, and which was not alleged as a cause of Stanton's removal, Johnson concludes his dastardly charge by creeping behind Grant. "The public interests have not suffered," he says, by Stanton's removal, because his successor has saved millions of dollars by his able administration of the War Department. But compliments to Grant will not serve to blacken Stanton's character nor to brighten that of his accuser. If Grant can perform the duties of Secretary of War so well, he ought to be a good judge of how others have performed them. So impressed was he of the high desert of Stanton, that when he unwillingly took his place to prevent an enemy of the country going there he wrote as follows to the retiring Secretary: "I cannot let the opportunity pass without expressing to you my appreciation of the zeal, patriotism, firmness and ability, with which you have discharged the duty of Secretary of War."

It is well, however, that Johnson has delivered that a riot and butchery occurred in New Orleans on July 30, 1866, which he sought and might have prevented. At that time and until now his pleas has been that the rioters and guilty parties were the victims themselves that they got themselves murdered in order to defeat his policy. But it is now too late for him to shift his ground. He cannot erase the record which proves that he was personally advised of what was about to occur, and that it was his own orders which encouraged and stimulated Voorhies, Herron and Monroe in their bloody work. Long before the Convention met, these men had protested to him against the issuance of writs of election for it by Governor Wells. He wrote to Wells demanding to know "by what authority he acted," and by what authority he expected the Convention to act. Though this was one of his State Governments, which he says are as independent in their sphere as those of the loyal States, it was with his knowledge and consent that Governor Wells was set aside and Lieutenant Governor Voorhies took his place. The report itself of that infamous triumvirate Voorhies, Herron and Monroe fixed upon Johnson full knowledge of and complicity with their actions. Before the Convention met they called on Gen. Baird and requested to [illegible] interfere with the arrest of its members, which was concocted by them. The Chief Justice informed them that the Sheriff himself should be assisted by him if he attempted to serve such writs, and accordingly [illegible] Monroe [illegible] inquiry to General Baird "whether he (Monroe) would be interfered with by the military in case he would proceed to disperse the Convention as an unlawful assemblage. The answer to this communication was that the [illegible] of the Convention, being peaceable, could not be [illegible] by the Mayor, and that the military authorities would protect the [illegible] of the civil authorities." It was evident from this that Baird stood like a lion in the way of [illegible], and that if he had been let alone the Convention would have been protected from the [illegible] and [illegible] that if you took him [illegible] "that if you ask him a [illegible] he will tell you that he has the [illegible] of his position." [illegible] they say, "was expected to [illegible] the Court." Their appeal to Johnson resulted as the triumvirate expected it would. In a [illegible] Washington, July 28th—the same day as [illegible] President of the United States [illegible] as follows: "The military will be expected to [illegible] and not obstruct or interfere with the [illegible] of the Courts."

Armed with this precious missive, signed "A. Johnson," Voorhies [illegible] upon General Baird on the morning of the riot, and showed him that by the President's [illegible] the military were made subject to the call of the civil authorities, and must not interfere against them. Baird was then obliged to [illegible] and hold his troops in waiting for orders from Voorhies, which, of course, never came. On the evening of that bloody day, Monroe had the impudence, when smiling face, to inquire of an ex-Major General of the United States, "if the thing had not been pretty well done?" This General, and with [illegible] Union men and officers, disgusted with the savage brutality they had been compelled to witness, prevailed upon Baird to proclaim martial law. Voorhies, Herron and Monroe again appealed to the President to sustain his [illegible] Baird. He again [illegible] with them and [illegible] Baird. After he knew of their riotous proceedings, he [illegible] did to know from General Baird the reason for declaring martial law. It was [illegible] by his orders, and the rebel triumvirate [illegible] promise till Sheridan was sent there to [illegible] President's guilt with [illegible] popularity. The hero of Winchester was restive under such rebel supremacy, and threw it off, putting the city again under martial law.

Such is the story of the New Orleans riots, from which Johnson hopes to gather something to excuse him for removing Stanton, but which epitomizes very briefly, yet truthfully, the whole theory and practical working of his policy of reconstruction. Who believes that Stanton, if he could have had his way, would not have squelched those Thugs of New Orleans as [illegible] and effectually as he would the policy which gave them life? If there is anything in these facts to justify the removal of the Secretary, much more do they call for the removal of the President.

Road to Goose Lake via Link River.

[From the Jacksonville Sentinel.]

Articles of incorporation have been filed by M. Hanley, Capt. McCall, J. D. Applegate, et al., for the purpose of constructing a wagon road from Ashland, in this county, over the mountains, intervening between this valley and the Klamath Lake valley; thence, eastward and intersecting the Oregon Central Military and Wagon Road, in the upper end of Goose Lake valley. Petitions are in circulation to secure an appropriation of land by Congress to aid in the construction of this road.

There is no doubt but the route proposed by this company is eminently necessary and practicable. It will cross the mountains, lying east of this valley, by a pass open most of the winter. The ground is solid and well fitted for a road. The route is direct to the Klamath Lake country, and is beyond all comparison, the nearest. The distance from Dr. Caldwell's place to the old Emigrant crossing of Klamath river is not over thirty miles. This distance, it is true, is all mountain; but the ascent of the mountain on this side is very gradual, and the [illegible] cut on the other almost imperceptible. Having ascended the mountain, the intervening distance is a level table land, upon which snow scarcely ever falls over three feet, and rarely that.

Having thus entered the great Klamath Lake Basin, there are no other mountains of any importance to be crossed.

The Klamath Lake country is fast settling up, and the fertile valleys still farther east, as soon as the settlers can be protected from hostile Indians, will be filled with inhabitants. While the people of Jackson county will reap an immediate benefit from the construction of this road, the advantages will not be confined to Jackson county alone.

Postal facilities must be supplied by the Government for the people east of us, and large sums of money would be saved to the Government every year in the transportation of supplies to her Indian Reservations and military posts in that direction.

There is no reason to doubt but what Congress, if the subject is properly presented by our delegation, (and we have no fears but what it will be) will readily grant an appropriation of land to aid in the construction of this much needed road. Congress has made a large appropriation for a far more impracticable route, a route completely blockaded with snow in the winter, and difficult of passage at any season of the year. How much more readily, then, for this route.

Dresden turns out 5,000 reams of albumenized paper yearly—enough for one hundred and twenty million photographs. Two million eggs are used in this manufacture.

Henry Ward Beecher received $25,000 from Mr. Bonner for "Norwood," and as the story was longer than was anticipated, an additional $5,000 has been paid.

Fire at the West [illegible]

About half-past eight o'clock [illegible] evening, just after the Daily had gone to [illegible] fire bell sounded an alarm and the [illegible] responded in great haste. The dry house of the factory, directly north of it, and only a few feet distant, was seen all ablaze. The [illegible] was 110 ft. long and 24 wide, kept [illegible] all the year by steam pipes introduced [illegible] a boiler house at the north end only 20 feet [illegible] and being built like a balloon it only [illegible] spark to touch the wood work to burn like [illegible]. The very cold weather had [illegible] the [illegible] of fires in the two stoves formerly in use, and [illegible] standing. The drying cloths are hung [illegible] sides of the room which are floored. A [illegible] space through the center, [illegible] by a [illegible] wall is open to the ground. In the [illegible] this ground space is a chimney to which [illegible] are conducted from stoves at either end. [illegible] newly kindled in these stoves. We learn from Mr. [illegible] that the damage by the late fire is more than his first [illegible] was in the day [illegible] for work [illegible] and it [illegible] will be [illegible] $1,200 [illegible] WHERE the [illegible] Work will [illegible] 22, by which time a new [illegible] leave [illegible] The [illegible] from it set the [illegible]

[illegible] they say, "was expected to [illegible] the Court." Their appeal to Johnson resulted as the triumvirate expected it would. In a [illegible] Washington, July 28th—the same day as [illegible] President of the United States [illegible] as follows: "The military will be expected to [illegible] and not obstruct or interfere with the [illegible] of the Courts."

Armed with this precious missive, signed "A. Johnson," Voorhies [illegible] upon General Baird on the morning of the riot, and showed him that by the President's [illegible] the military were made subject to the call of the civil authorities, and must not interfere against them. Baird was then obliged to [illegible] and hold his troops in waiting for orders from Voorhies, which, of course, never came. On the evening of that bloody day, Monroe had the impudence, when smiling face, to inquire of an ex-Major General of the United States, "if the thing had not been pretty well done?" This General, and with [illegible] Union men and officers, disgusted with the savage brutality they had been compelled to witness, prevailed upon Baird to proclaim martial law. Voorhies, Herron and Monroe again appealed to the President to sustain his [illegible] Baird. He again [illegible] with them and [illegible] Baird. After he knew of their riotous proceedings, he [illegible] did to know from General Baird the reason for declaring martial law. It was [illegible] by his orders, and the rebel triumvirate [illegible] promise till Sheridan was sent there to [illegible] President's guilt with [illegible] popularity. The hero of Winchester was restive under such rebel supremacy, and threw it off, putting the city again under martial law.

Such is the story of the New Orleans riots, from which Johnson hopes to gather something to excuse him for removing Stanton, but which epitomizes very briefly, yet truthfully, the whole theory and practical working of his policy of reconstruction. Who believes that Stanton, if he could have had his way, would not have squelched those Thugs of New Orleans as [illegible] and effectually as he would the policy which gave them life? If there is anything in these facts to justify the removal of the Secretary, much more do they call for the removal of the President.

Road to Goose Lake via Link River.

[From the Jacksonville Sentinel.]

Articles of incorporation have been filed by M. Hanley, Capt. McCall, J. D. Applegate, et al., for the purpose of constructing a wagon road from Ashland, in this county, over the mountains, intervening between this valley and the Klamath Lake valley; thence, eastward and intersecting the Oregon Central Military and Wagon Road, in the upper end of Goose Lake valley. Petitions are in circulation to secure an appropriation of land by Congress to aid in the construction of this road.

There is no doubt but the route proposed by this company is eminently necessary and practicable. It will cross the mountains, lying east of this valley, by a pass open most of the winter. The ground is solid and well fitted for a road. The route is direct to the Klamath Lake country, and is beyond all comparison, the nearest. The distance from Dr. Caldwell's place to the old Emigrant crossing of Klamath river is not over thirty miles. This distance, it is true, is all mountain; but the ascent of the mountain on this side is very gradual, and the [illegible] cut on the other almost imperceptible. Having ascended the mountain, the intervening distance is a level table land, upon which snow scarcely ever falls over three feet, and rarely that.

Having thus entered the great Klamath Lake Basin, there are no other mountains of any importance to be crossed.

The Klamath Lake country is fast settling up, and the fertile valleys still farther east, as soon as the settlers can be protected from hostile Indians, will be filled with inhabitants. While the people of Jackson county will reap an immediate ben

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JAN. 1, 1868

The Old Year and the New.

While we on the western shore of the American continent were sitting down to our dinners on the 31st of December, 1867, the new year had already touched the eastern verge of Europe, and begun its march westward. Soon it will complete the circuit of the globe, "and then," (we quote the language of a great Scottish writer, so celebrated and so lamented, we mean Hugh Miller), "at some undiscernible point not yet fixed by the philosopher, it will find itself transformed from the last into the first and day of the year; and then it will continue to roll on, round and round like an Archimedes screw, picking up at every gyration an additional unit, until the whole number of days in the year shall be completed."

The solemn poet of the Night has written in that great moral work which is destined to a... of instruction and consolation for unnumbered ages, that,

> "He greatly errs to talk with our past hours,
> And ask them what report they bore to Heaven.

Such rash quests give lessons for the future, and when they do not always bring pleasure, they may always be made profitable. Through all time poets, moralists, and philosophers have employed this occasion, the expiring moments of the departing year, to inculcate lessons drawn from each departure and to encourage mankind to look to the future by inducing them to look back upon the past.

The year is ended, and its events have passed into history. As the dying year is making its exit we may look back upon the scenes which it has presented, but which have now passed forever beyond any human power to control or modify them. "What is writ is writ." In the words of the Great Poet of Nature, "it is for us now to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us." "To-morrow to fresh fields and pastures new," sings the bard in the exquisite monody of Lycidas;—a motto which is highly suitable on the first day of the closing year. The old year is now far from our reach, and our business is hence forth with the new year of grace, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight. But a few hours longer and the entire globe will be girdled "with the zone of the new-born year," and all the peoples of the earth will have entered together upon that career which is destined to form still another era in the history of time.

"Many centuries have elapsed,"—we think again from the eloquent writer of Scotland,—"since the shepherds first heard the midnight song in Bethlehem,—'Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, good will to men.' And yet the new year shall pass over pulpits and gibbets, and battle fields on which the living and the murdered lie wildered and unburied; it will see the gun and the sword and the murdering knife in the hands of lawless banditti and captives in the hands of tyrannous conquerors. It will look down on smooth faced hypocrisy and worshippers of false prophets in the mosque; and on much idle and bitter controversy among those whose proper work is the education of the world. But the years shall grow and a change shall come: the morning light slowly and in clouds, but the dawn has broken and it will shine forth more and more, until the darkness shall have dispersed and the obscene fogs shall have dissipated, and all living and glad men shall the blaze of the day."

[illegible] of the Oregon State Year.

We have received lately to this report. It is a neatly printed pamphlet of seventy-two pages, published by J. L. Stevens of Salem. It is mainly [illegible] and annual addresses by J. M. Deady and E. B. Dufer, and the list of premiums awarded by the Society.

Besides these five "Prize Essays," all from the pen, [illegible] the subjects of "Deep and Shallow Plowing," "Culture of Swale Lands," "Culture of Farm Lands," "Cattle Raising," "Horse Raising," and nothing about House keeping. [illegible] English cattle and horses are [illegible]. This we admit is not a very [illegible]. In an essay on stock breeding [illegible] material than the reader. The [illegible] Short Horns are bold and pudgy, and do not [illegible] the appearance of things. In fact they [illegible] as small [illegible] of beefcle[illegible]. The sum [illegible] seems to settle "raising" [illegible] the Journal remarks that "the great [illegible] raising" not to overstock your [illegible]. This is the boy note of the pamphlet. The [illegible] only had one [illegible] of cattle "raised" [illegible] and the [illegible] proportion between the [illegible] of cattle and the acre of "range," [illegible].

[illegible] should be found about the [illegible] and he at once [illegible] to the [illegible] is all avoided." But [illegible] should take place a few days [illegible] or later than the 25th of September—just what the "jumping parson" in that [illegible] will it all be "avoided," or only subdued into a [illegible] water across the country? But [illegible] this "jumping parson?" This exercise [illegible] or let it, to which the juvenile horse is to be liable, needs explanation. A [illegible] on this subject should not deal in [illegible] generalities. The writer [illegible] to us should do with himself as he [illegible] us to do with our lands—"substitute [illegible] for—How."

"Pluck" is a favorite word with the writer of "[illegible]." We have a "pluck" not [illegible] we hope "for getting swale lands into [illegible]." By this means we learn that "it is not [illegible] to harrow or plough, as the rains will be [illegible] to feed the seed up." If it be a fact that the [illegible] will fetch the seed up," how can it grow, and [illegible] shall we get a crop of grass? Paul, writing to the Corinthians, says: "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." But here we have a new "process" of [illegible] in which the seed does not die but is "fetched up" bodily from the ground to [illegible] in the air. This is too bad for a "prize essay."

In the midst of [illegible] of each of the horse and cattle essays of this prize series, it is observed that "much more might be said on this subject, but we think this will suffice." No doubt the opinion of [illegible] will coincide with the latter part of this remark.

At the close of the pamphlet we have a number of "[illegible] reports" from various persons who exhibited animals at the Fair, in which are set forth the [illegible] degree of the latter and the method pursued in rearing them. These we think, will be found interesting and useful to stock breeders, and will redound credit upon the enterprise of the State in that particular.

From these marks we except the manifesto of the [illegible] of that procreative prodigy, the "thoroughbred jack, Ajax." Whether this animal monster was named after the [illegible] or less Ajax, we are not informed. The former being distinguished in the Grecian story for strength and stupidity, it might be inferred that the four-footed Ajax was [illegible] for the son of Telamon. But as the latter is chiefly remembered on account of his violation of the vestal Cassandra in the temple of Athena, on the night of the sack of Troy, it may be safe to assume that this is the "Ajax" whose memory is to be perpetuated in Polkby the exploits of the "Thoroughbred."

By this statement we are informed that "Ajax" "is of the English breed," but from the assertion that "he wintered himself (at Boise) on four feet of snow," we should think it more likely that his progenitors were from Siberia or Kamschatka. The exhibitor says that "his written pedigree is up on the Lucklamute." We are glad that it is there, and that it is written. We hope it is not in Greek like that of his illustrious prototype. But be that as it may, we are satisfied that upon further examination it will appear that the Ajax that "wintered himself on four feet of snow," is descended from the jacks of the North Pole, and not from those of England.

In talking about "Ajax" the exhibitor descends to disgusting details which ought not to be tolerated outside of the stable-yard, and which should have induced the managers of the society to refuse the publication in their proceedings. It pollutes the page of the report. If "the pedigree on the Lucklamute" is in the same style, we are glad that it "did not arrive in time to put it in" also.

Poor old Beriah continues to whine and snarl because we have occasionally published articles reviewing his record, exposing the absurdities and follies of his profound leaders, etc., etc. We have quoted quite liberally from the paper which he published in 1864, and he calls this "calumniating" him. It is not surprising that any person should deem himself slandered by having it shown that he wrote such articles. Poor old Beriah pretends that he don't know who the editor of the OREGONIAN is, and that he therefore cannot reply to what he chooses to consider as "charges against his honor." This mode of defence is exceedingly lame. For nearly two years he has been assailing us with personal abuse, talking about the "school boy editor," the "graduate of a rural academy," and the inexperienced youth who, since his infancy, has not been "out of sight of the green forests of Oregon;" and now, after we have proved him an ignoramus, shown that he was a secessionist, annihilated every position which he has taken in history, law, or politics, and made it uncomfortably warm for him generally, he pretends to hold himself entirely above all controversy, and would like to make his readers believe he has too much dignity to notice the OREGONIAN. Hosannah that he does not know who the person is with whom he has had so many unfortunate contests, and this though he has been assailing us personally ever since he has been in Oregon. We can inform him that he has no chance whatever of obtaining a personal acquaintance with us except on a certain contingency which he does not wish to happen. But we shall continue to give him a thrust now and then, and perhaps make some more "charges against his honor" by quoting from the paper he published during the rebellion.

The Cincinnati Gazette, a very intelligent and able paper, remarks: "As we have not the least doubt that monetary and financial affairs were the chief cause of the Republican repulse in Ohio, so we have not that the same cause defeated the Republicans in New York. Politics are in a strange situation when the Republican party is defeated by the monetary and financial policy of the Johnson administration, which every Democrat in Congress supported, while Johnson claims it as the popular approval of his policy."

NOT COMING.—It was announced a few weeks since that General McClellan would return home this fall. The statement proves to be incorrect. The General did indeed leave Dresden, and has got as far as France in his forward movement. Now, he intends to go into winter quarters at Paris. Should no unexpected obstacle intervene, and cause him again to change his mind, he will probably be seen in New York some time during the ensuing year.

LATE WASHINGTON NEWS.

The following is a New York dispatch of Dec. 6th:

The Tribune's Washington special says: John B. Haskin of New York, John Hickman of Pennsylvania, and John F. Reynolds, all prominent Democrats, have recently arrived in Washington. Haskin has been sounding the President on the Patti[illegible] question.

A meeting took place at Mr. Black's to-night for the purpose of comparing notes on a candidate. Messrs. [illegible] of [illegible], Seymour, Pendleton and others were severally discussed, but none of them was accepted. A new man was [illegible] upon. Messrs. Haskin, Irvin and others, who had just been with the President, stated that Mr. Johnson told them that Gen. Hancock was decidedly unfriendly, and had only begun the programme that had been laid out by them two months ago. They allow it to be understood that Gen. Hancock was Johnson's choice, and was the only man that could make a show against Grant. Certainly the clique of politicians, at their meeting to-night, privately nominated Gen. Hancock for next President, and pledged themselves to his support.

No one could be agreed upon for Vice President. Haskin and Hoffman were spoken of, but Hancock being a Pennsylvanian, the West, it was suggested, would claim the [illegible]. Haskin was promised the next gubernatorial [illegible] in New York.

The above named gentlemen called to-day on Gen. Rawlings, chief of Grant's staff, to learn whether the recent order of Gen. Hancock was revoked, whether Gen. Hancock's [illegible] met Gen. Grant's approval, and to elicit any information on the subject in the possession of the Lieutenant. Gen. Rawlings stated that when Gen. Grant took command he received special instructions from Gen. Grant in reference to military matters in Louisiana, but [illegible] they were not Gen. Hancock's recent action or not he could not tell. He understood the facts would be developed in a few days, as the subject had been brought prominently before the Acting Secretary of War and the President by persons who opposed Gen. Hancock's administration.

The following [illegible] were had in the Senate on the 9th of December:

On motion, Mr. [illegible] submitted the following which was ordered printed:

[illegible]. That the commissioners on Canadian relations be directed to enter into the consideration of a treaty between the United States and the dominion of Canada, which shall contain the following propositions:

1st. That a duty of five per cent. advalorem shall be imposed on all imports into the United States from Canada, being the exclusive production or manufacture of Canada to the United States, or from the United States to Canada, which shall be substituted for existing tariffs of the representative countries.

2d. That the articles of the United States and Canada shall be assimilated by concurrent legislation.

3d. The navigation of the lakes, canals, and channel of St. Lawrence shall be forever free to citizens of the United States and Canada.

4th. That Canadian vessels in American ports shall be entitled to all the privileges of American vessels in Canadian ports.

5th. That the fisheries of the Atlantic coast shall be free to the citizens of both countries.

6th. That the common system of laws regulating Copy Right, Patent Rights, and Postage shall be extended over both countries.

7th. That Canada will insist that Great Britain shall cede to the United States the districts of North America west of longitude 95 degrees, on condition, to-wit:

First, the United States will pay $500,000 to the Hudson Bay Co., in full discharge of all claims to the territory, or the jurisdiction in North America, whether founded on the charter of the company, treaty, law or usage.

2d. The United States will assume the public debt of British Columbia, not exceeding $2,000,000.

3d. The construction of the Northern Pacific railroad to Puget Sound. The U. S. in addition to the grant of land before made, will guarantee a dividends of 5 per cent. on stock of said companies provided the amount of stock guaranteed as aforesaid, shall not exceed $20,000 per mile.

4th. The Northwestern territory shall be divided and organized into territories of the U. S. not less than three in number, with all the rights and privileges of citizens and the government of Montana territory so far as can be made applicable.

STATE ITEMS.

The Jacksonville papers tell of a difficulty at the Willow Springs between white men and Chinamen, founded on a conflict of boundary of a mining claim. The row was not serious, and the men of whom the Chinamen purchased the disputed ground eventually made the title good.

The Coos county rioters have tried, says the Coloniist, at a special term of the Circuit Court at Empire City, on the 10th inst. Judge Skinner presiding. Sentenced to the Penitentiary as follows, and on Saturday materialized in Major Berry's "Constitutional Democratic Institution" J. C. McCarty, John Short and Cornelius Cragan, each three years; James Darkes, five years.

The Record has the following from Booth Yamhill: "As there are many apprehensions in regard to the late freshet, as to the damage done to bridges, &c., on the head of South Yamhill, for the benefit of those interested, I am able to state that the bridges are all right—the only damage being the removal of some small bridges on the sloughs and slight damages by removal of earth from some of the farms on the bottom lands.

RECREATION AND AMUSEMENT.

It is necessary that mortals should have some amusement, and since our city is not blessed with an elegant theatre, or some place of innocent amusement, it is the duty of every man to see that his acquaintances coming to our city should at least be pleased, and how can you please them better than by taking them to KOHN & FINKELS', No. 91 Front street, to buy one of those handsome suits they keep for sale.

PROCLAMATION!!!

I've come, my dear people, among you once more,
Keeping up the good custom established of yore
I bid you all welcome! I wish you good cheer—
A right merry Christmas and Happy New Year!
You will find me this year, as you have heretofore,
At McCormick's, on Front street—the Franklin Book Store
Where I've opened my Budget—'twas filled to the brim
With every nice Toy that could talk, walk or swim,
I've Musical Work Boxes and Guns for the fair
And Gifts for the Gents that are both rich and rare,
Whilst my Budget includes the nicest new Toys
Intended as Gifts to good Girls and Boys!
I've the Ark in which Grandfather Noah was kept
When all other creatures from the world were swept,
(For men in those days would in evil persist,
So the world was washed by an Oregon mist!)
I've Babies of Rubber, of wax and of leather,
(They were all made to order), and well put together;
I've Vases and Cups nicely gilded outside,
And little Clock Horses for Bobbies to ride;
I've Cannon and Pistols which cannot explode,
For the reason they hold neither wadding or load.
I've steamboats that run—you just wind them in front
And they'll beat the Cascade or the Wilson G. Hunt.
I've a new Locomotive—It can never explode,
'Twas built for the use of Gaston's Railroad,
I've Engines that play—Set them down on the floor
And they'll throw greater streams than old '2' or new '4.'
I've Furniture, Fiddles, and French Pistlers,
Soldiers that look like B. B. Pioneers.
I've Swords made of tin—Guns and Pistols as well,
And the new kind of Drum that rings like a bell.
I've Masks of all sizes—I've Grace Hoops, galore,
And you'll find at McCORMICK'S a thousand Toys more,
On FRONT STREET the Store is—105,
Where TOYS are as plenty as bees in a hive;
Go there and buy them—this is my request,
His Prices are Low and his Stock is the Best.

L.S. Given at my Palace in Wonderland, this 30th day of the eleventh month, being the first year of the reign of George the Third in Webfoot.

EXPORTS AND EXPORTS OF BREADSTUFFS.—During the year 1867, just closed, the receipts of flour and wheat received at this city from the interior Willamette valley as per manifests of the steamers, and the exports by sea-going vessels, foot up as follows:

	RECEIVED.		EXPORTED.
	Flour, bbls.	Wheat, bls.	Flour, bbls.	Wheat, bls.
January	30,022	2,029	28,010	3,160
February	31,421	896	24,428	508
March	38,997	514	29,987
April	46,478	2,400	46,283	251
May	51,108	3,736	47,294	5,508
June	47,754	4,662	39,111	1,970
July	13,964	645	9,477	99
August	16,015	103	24,992	205
September	25,085	1,358	10,671	414
October	24,304	12,019	34,058	8,370
November	28,134	16,976	46,004	7,883
December	43,945	6,660	70,689	11,644
Totals	418,967	55,368	481,703	43,130

During the months of September, October and November, large amounts came into the city by wagon—during part of the time, an average of 1,500 sacks per day. It is safe to estimate the receipts in that way, during the three fall months, at 67,000 sacks of 120 pounds each. In addition to this, there have been our liberable receipts of flour from Walla Walla and Eastern Oregon, but as we have no data upon which to found an estimate, we leave them out of the calculation. The excess of exports of flour over the receipts, 62,736 qr sks, is accounted for by the fact that the mills of this city have manufactured largely of the wheat, the receipts of which are in excess of the exports by 12,245 sacks, and that portions of the receipts from the Columbia river, have entered into the exports.

A supervision of the exports of this year with those of last, show a remarkable increase. The Portland Directory for 1867, states the exports of flour during 1866, as 29,816 bbls, or 119,260 qr sacks. The wheat exports of that year were too inconsiderable for mention.

THE PLAZA.—Last year we had our growl about the neglected condition of the city Plaza. It did no good. The city Fathers didn't care the snap of their official fingers for it. We are not at all sure but they turned up their noses at it. Believing, however, in the doctrine of "perseverance conquers all things," we pad interest in growl again sometime during the present winter season; but just as we had begun to bottle up thunder for the occasion, we met with the following very neat thrusts in our religious contemporary, the Advocate, and being content to let them have a better time of it, we have concluded to waive our growl, spare the venerable beards of the city Fathers, and all of the finer humor of Hon. D. S. This is what he says, and how he says it; "It is presumed that the 'Plaza' [illegible] between Third and Fourth streets, in the center of which a liberty pole stands, is intended for a city park, though quite contrary [illegible] for such [illegible]. Three years have [illegible] since it was [illegible] and sown in grass. Two side-walks have been laid around it. Trees have been planted outside for shade, and a few stiff rails used bushes ornament the inside. Two crops of hay have been harvested and a few milch cows have occasionally been herded on the ground. As to the management of persons that according to the city treasury we are not [illegible] d. Gates are conveniently arranged at the several corners, also on the east and west sides of the plaza. Whether they are not good to secure the cows on the inside, or to keep rude boys on the outside of these picturesque pleasure grounds, we cannot determine. But as they are effectually and beautifully barricaded, we conclude they are intended for ornament rather than utility. Just now they [illegible] slightly out of [illegible] it is broken in several eight places, accidentally [illegible] to furnish [illegible] the ingress for the dozens of boys who have chosen [illegible] their recreation, and have nothing new to do but [illegible] themselves by taking exercise in the Park. The boys cannot be justly censured for accidents which [illegible] to the fence, for the gates are so close [illegible] to [illegible] as to admit of ingress in the normal way. With these and [illegible] please make repairs, and furnish additional facilities for the amusement of the young men of the city [illegible] ages range from six to fourteen years? Our Park, by the way, is the pride of the city. How it must attract the attention of visiting strangers.

LEAP YEAR.—The old year is [illegible]. Tattered and torn, it has gone to sleep with its fathers. Who cares for it? It was not much of a year anyhow. If anybody got an [illegible] out of it, they are in debt to it, and [illegible] glad if it must come back to dun them. If anybody [illegible] got any good out of it, they should thank their stars that they have lived out it into another, and [illegible] better year. At all events, all can afford to flitter away any portion of the new year whining or gush-flag over the dead [illegible] of the old. Let the dead bury its dead and the living [illegible] living. Time has turned over a new leaf—let us turn with it and read on in the new volume. The year 1868 is to be a high-toned [illegible] in that it has one of the old [illegible] which stands between us and the Day of Judgment. For the next [illegible] days including this first one, the women are to run the [illegible]; the male [illegible] are to act simply as ciphers and lay figures. The following is the law as quoted from an [illegible] and highly respectable authority: "Albeit, it is a grave question in parts of the Continent [illegible] opened to the [illegible] relations of life, that as often as every bissextile year doth return, the ladyes have the sole privilege, during time it continueth, of making love unto men, which they may doe either by words or looks, as unto them it [illegible] most [illegible] and [illegible] will be [illegible] to the [illegible] of clergy who do the refuse to accept the offer of a ladye, or who [illegible] in any wise [illegible] with slight or contumely." That's what's the matter with Hannah, and every masculine gender will please take notice.

A LOCAL REPORTER AT A FIRE.—We find in one of our exchanges the following tale of how a local editor went after a first-class item, how he [illegible] and how he came to grief. His experience was not at all [illegible] one, as it will like [illegible]. This is the story: Charles Smith, local editor of the Patriot, went to the late fire at Friend's, to help salvage the flames and take notes. The fire was well under headway when he arrived on the ground, and [illegible] to find a [illegible] to show his agility. A gentleman asked him to carry [illegible] and [illegible] bucket, when he remarked, "Guess you don't know who I am!" "Well, who is it under any [illegible]" said the man. "Me? I'm local editor of the Patriot!" The man had no more to say, and Charley sat down on a [illegible] of wood and [illegible] to taking notes. "Hot fire," said another man to Charley, a few moments later. Just then he discovered the wood on which he was setting was on fire, and the rest of his [illegible] were well [illegible]. "Hot, did you say; hot, hell, why it is [illegible]," replied Charley, springing to his feet and nursing the injured parts. Charley threw away the note-book, observing that he thought he should remember the particulars of the fire. The above incident, which we get from an eye witness, [illegible] our contemporary, and other will become absorbed on a first-class item.

STEAM WORK.—We are now able, through the kindness of persons connected with the office of City Surveyor, to state approximately the amount of street work done in this city during the year 1867, exclusive of repairs. As we stated some time ago, there have been laid five miles of side-walk. The plank roadways just [illegible] amount to 3,320 lineal feet. The excavations and filling of streets is the work of grading now in this [illegible] stated: First street, from Madison to Harrison—excavations, 2,223 cubic yards of earth; filling, 1,553 yards. Second street, [illegible] to Harrison—excavations, 687 yards; filling, 650. Third street, A to Harrison—excavations, 2,370 yds; filling 2,925. Oak, Front to Second—excavations 2 yds; filling, gravel, 143 yds. Salmon, First to East Park—excavation 196 yds; filling 177 yds. Portcth, A to Harrison—excavation, 1,383 yds; filling 515 yds. Alder, from First to Seventh—excavations, 1,455 filling, 927 yds. Second, from A to Madison—excavation, 874 yds; filling, 1,903 yds. Total excavations, 9,650 cubic yards; filling, 7,318 cubic yards. The cost of excavating 15½ filling average about 25 cents per yard, making the total cost of grading, $4,349 50.

FISH HUNTING.—Since the advent of the "melancholy days," looking for items of news, has been much like the experience of Japhet in search of his father. Japhet was ignorant of his father's name, or whether, indeed, he had a father at all. Seeing that everybody about him had one, either in the flesh or in the spirit, he argued that he might, by analogy to have one, also. Proceeding upon this conclusion, Japhet provisioned himself with stuff and corn and a modicum of bread and cheese, started to search of his progenitor. He traveled up; traveled down; traveled in circles; traveled hard; traveled long; sometimes with a clue which he didn't understand, and then without any clue at all. In the course of his travels, Japhet was buffeted, lampooned, slandered, scuffled and severed, variously by various people. He grew to quite patriarchal years, himself, before his travels and trials were ended—but Japhi found his father. Japhet was the original item hunter, from whom all the present local editors sprang—and every one of the latter has inherited his ancestor's luck, good and bad.

PROPER USE OF THE SIDEWALKS.—We are informed upon the most unquestionable authority, that every city which pretends to respectability, as a city, has enterprise enough, either public or private, to shovel the snow and slush from its principal side-walks. With a very few honorable exceptions, the business men of Front and First streets have neglected to manifest any such enterprise and still look contentedly out of their front doors upon the slush accumulations of Sunday and Monday. They seem to be not at all desirous of stopping it, and to become vocal that nobody cares a straw about stepping in. They coat these people strain a point and shovel off their little sections of sidewalk, or pay a scavenger twenty-five cents to do it for them.

POLICE ITEMS.—We are indebted to Mr. Jos Parthow, Deputy Marshal, for the following comparative statement of arrests by the police during the last three years. In the year 1867 —drunks, 108; assaults, 121; larceny, 59. In the year 1866,—drunks, 227; assaults, 91; larceny, 41. In the year 1865,—drunks, 104; assaults, 98; larceny, 65. These figures show a decrease of 119 drunks in 1867 as compared with the previous year, an increase of convictions, by 30 cases of fight, and an increase of 18 cases of stealing. In the case of drunks, lowly, has the past year been an improvement upon the previous one.

FIRE ALARM.—An alarm of fire was rung from the bells of the several engine houses, about half past eight o'clock last evening, proceeding from the burning of a tar barrel somewhere in the neighborhood of Morrison and Third streets. The engines were out with their accustomed promptness. Both of the steam engines had up steam upon reaching the corner of Morrison and Second streets and could have immediately begun to throw water effectively, demonstrating that steam engines can be used about as quickly upon an alarm as any other.

THE TELEGRAPH.—The line was down again last evening between here and Vancouver, and south, somewhere below Yreka. The operator there informed the operator here, yesterday, that an other storm, not less severe than the former one, was prevailing at that place and points south of it. The Steam Kings is evidently on the rampage.

PRODUCE.—Arrived per steamer Alert from Oregon City, yesterday, 711 boxes apples, 63 bbl bbls and 14 boxes miscellaneous produce, 2,340 qr sks flour, 5 kegs, 5 cases and 7 tins lard, 1 bundle skins, 73 sks barley and 100 sks feed.

TO LOAD WITH LUMBER.—The bark Brewster will go down to St Helens on Thursday to load with lumber for San Francisco. This cargo, about 240,000 feet will be the initial shipment by the St. Helens Mill Co. to their branch lumber yard in that city. The bark Alma is expected to load with lumber when she arrives which will probably be within the next two or three weeks. Mr. Abbott the Agent of the Company in San Francisco, will go down on the first steamer subsequent to the sailing of the Brewster. He is a gentleman of unlimited energy and if anybody can succeed in the Company's new undertaking, he can and will.

THE CITY COUNCIL.—The special meeting of the Council called for last evening was a failure for want of a quorum, there being present only His Honor, Mayor Chapman, and Messrs Besser, Burch, Porter and Rosenheim. They waited as patiently as possible until 8 o'clock in hopes a quorum would appear, to wind up the business of the closing year. The absence of the other members, however, outbalanced the patience of those present, and the latter adjourned to pleasanter scenes—New Years Eve at home.

RICHARDSON.—In accordance with his usual custom, upon New Years Eve, Mr A B Richardson visited upon the OREGONIAN office last evening a basket of refreshments and something else, withal, to give them tone. Richardson has long since been considered an "institution," and the printers would as soon think it possible for Santa Claus to fail of his annual visit, as for long Hon Richardson.

ST. HELENS MILL CO.—At a meeting of the stock holders of the St Helens Mill Co., Dec 27th, the following officers were elected: Directors—J M Ritchey, S. B. Abbott, J. H. Ritchey James Dart, James Ladd; James Ladd, President, Geo. A Ladd, Secretary; James Dart, Superintendent. S B Abbott, Agent in San Francisco.

LUNCH.—The new proprietors of the Western Hotel, Messrs. Sewall & Dacy, did us magnificently last evening in the way of a New Years Eve lunch, for which all hands joined in thanking them, and drank to the continued prosperity of both house and proprietors.

NO PAPER TO-MORROW.—There will be no issue of the DAILY OREGONIAN, to morrow, this day being one of the four great annual holidays, on which no printer with a printer's consilience, will work.

TREASURER RECEIPT.—Wells, Fargo & Co received last evening by the Hunt, $35,000 in treasure from Eastern Oregon and the Columbia towns.

ARCHITECT.—We call attention to the card of Mr. John Nestor, architect, under the head of "New To-day." Mr Nestor, by a strict application to business and unswerving integrity, has achieved an enviable rank among the architects of this State. The confidence which builders repose in him is best attested by the number of large and important buildings, the designs of which are entrusted wholly to his skill and experience. Office in Carter's building, corner Front and Alder.

CAPITOL, OLYMPIA, Dec. 11th, 1867.

DR. GROSS, Portland—Sir: I have been in the habit of using the "HEDELY ROYAL BALSAM" in my family, who reside at Wallula, Walla Walla county, W. T. I am now at Olympia, attending the present session of the Legislature, and the climate is so different from that of Walla Walla county that I have taken cold, and I have endeavored to purchase some of the medicine here but was unable to do so. Please send a bottle up immediately by mail. I have used nothing else in my family and cannot get along without it. Yours truly,
J. M. VANSYCKLE

DR. G. W. COOL,
DENTIST.
THOSE WHO DESIRE FIRST-CLASS DENTAL SERVICES might do well to give him a call. He is making a NEW AND IMPROVED VULCANITE PLATE. The nature of his improvement consists in lining the entire concave surface with fine gold; it makes the plate twice as strong and one-third times thinner than the common vulcanite plate. It also prevents the acids of the mouth from corroding the plate, and from turning it black, which is a common occurrence. One half of the common vulcanite plates turn black after being in use a short time, particularly where tobacco is used for smoking. This lining adds to the elasticity of the plate on the concave or palate surface. His office is the only place where such work can be had. The improvement is his own invention, for which he has received December 3d, 1867, a patent from the United States Patent Office. He has been making this style of work for the last two and a half years, and has specimens of the work which can be seen at his office. This work has given satisfaction in every case.

PERRY DAVIS' VEGETABLE PAIN KILLER.
THE UNIVERSAL REMEDY FOR INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL COMPLAINTS!
At this period there are but few of the human race unacquainted with the merits of the Pain Killer; but while some extol it as a liniment, they know but little of its power in easing pain when taken internally, while others use it internally with great success, but are equally ignorant of its healing virtues when applied externally. We therefore wish to say to all that it is equally successful whether used internally or externally, and it stands alone, unrivalled by all the great catalogue of Family Medicines, and its sales are universal and immense. The demand for it from India and other foreign countries is equal to the demand at home, and it has become known in these far off places by its merits.
Just Cause for being Alarmed.—When a Cough has been running for a long time, and you begin to feel a pain setting in upon your lungs, attended with tightness across the chest, it is high time that you should awaken to the danger of your disease which is fast running into Consumption. Now, before it is too late, use ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM, which will cure the disease, and all will be well with you. For sale by the Dealers in Family Medicines generally.

A Man who Married a Wife.

[From the Public Spirit.]

I have cultivated acquaintance in the course of a life which has had in it much itineracy, with many country hotels. What my itinerating guise has been, does not matter, perhaps; but the curious reader is welcome to a guess, if that Yankee faculty be among his mental havings. I may have been a peddler of tin-ware. I may have been a Methodist circuit rider. I may have been a detective policeman. I may have been a lecturer on the science of phrenology, with illustrative charts. I may have been a bird collector. I may have been a vagabond without any tin to my hat. I may have been a gentleman of wealth and leisure. I may have been a wandering Jew with a box of cheap jewelry. I may have been a clown to a traveling circus. Guessing is a beautiful exercise. I have been none of these.

One night in mid-winter I entered the house of mine host Barrows, with my hair frozen stiff about my ears, and my nose on an icicle in color and feel. It was being sold out o'-doors, but there was a bright fire burning in a broad old fashioned fireplace, and around it sat a group of sleepy-looking men, toasting their shins before the ruddy blaze.

The reader, for whose superior powers of mind I have a profound respect, is also at liberty to guess where Barrow's hotel is or was; but as it is of no kind of importance, perhaps if may be as well not to dwell on the subject. It is an old stone building not so ancient, perhaps, as the Mayflower Inn that Barnaby Rudge was wont to visit, and not destined to the fate of that well kept but unfortunate hostlery—and its bar has no grove of [illegible]. But Barrows himself was there, on this night of nights, and his face looked sour enough to have just swallowed a lemon grove without sugar. It was a good natured face, too, in the ordinary, but to-night the loss of Barrow's old heart had been subject to a stirring.

I made my way up to the cheerful blaze, and [illegible] myself like a water-dog, to the manifest dismay of the group of sleepy toasters; who shiver'd and hugged themselves at sight of me, [illegible] the cold and dreary night.

"Good evening, Mr. Webb," said Barrows, coming [illegible] to take my overcoat and wrappers. "You had such a stinger afore this year—plays the devil with my party."

"A party to-night, Barrows?" said I.

"Yes, was to have been, but the dancers didn't come. Ye[illegible]s this, ye know, and wouldn't come in waggins on such a night as this. I'm out of pocket a pretty figure by it."

And the host ran gently and confessed.

"Nobody was, eh?" said I, as I parted my coat tails and turned my back to the fire.

"Oh, yes," said Barrows, contemptuously, pointing to the shin toasters—"and every man of 'em with a w[illegible]. And what's a ball without —"

"Ah, I [illegible]?" said I philosophically; "[illegible]something with [illegible]? Women are [illegible] joy in [illegible] of this unhappy vale of tears, [illegible] party can be said to be complete [illegible] them—except among the Indians, where I never marry, I shall marry a woman."

"Haw, haw, haw!" roared the Lincolnshire [illegible] whose ear is the coarser, and who thus testified the [illegible] of an appreciative mind at my [illegible]. "Why, you'd have to marry a [illegible] if you wanted it at all."

"I have a mean nose," said a queer looking [illegible] with a very long pipe, solemnly, "but I [illegible]."

"Not [illegible]," said the Warwickshire man. "We've [illegible] stories afore you come in, and it [illegible] you have not. But you'll tell a better nor [illegible]."

"[illegible]," said I philosophically; "[illegible]something with [illegible]? Women are [illegible] joy in [illegible] of this unhappy vale of tears, [illegible] party can be said to be complete [illegible] them—except among the Indians, where I never marry, I shall marry a woman."

"Not [illegible]," said the Warwickshire man. "We've [illegible] stories afore you come in, and it [illegible] you have not. But you'll tell a better nor [illegible]."

"All in due time," said Mr. Smith; "that was a pretty [illegible], and I'd like to hear another. That young man by your side looks to me as if he had [illegible] in his eye, and if it's about a woman we'll hear it."

"I make no [illegible]," said the young man alluded to, "about a [illegible] my mother told me, and which I know to be true, [illegible] mother knew some of the parties."

"[illegible] for you, my lad, for your faith in your mother's truthfulness. We'll listen with all the more [illegible] for that."

"It was before I [illegible] this occurred, sir, that my mother was born, in the village of Turkey Neck—you may have heard of it. There was a Mr. Newt, there, a wheelwright of considerable wealth, who lived unhappy with his wife. She was a high [illegible] woman, and he was not so [illegible] and [illegible] a man as he ought to have been. They used to quarrel very bad, mother said, and at last Mrs. Newt went home to her father's, somewhere in Pennsylvania, and declared she would never return back to her husband so long as he [illegible] alive. He did, though they lived very divorced, starting to law. Jealousy, with [illegible] of it, of course. Mr. Newt used to go to see a widow woman in the next town, about ten miles off, and stay there sometimes two or three days to [illegible] on business of hers.

"After Mrs. Newt went home to her father's, Mr. Newt used to go and see this Mrs. Goss more than ever, and about a year later, he brought her home with him, and set her up in his house. Of course this was a good deal of talk; and every body wondered what Mrs. Newt would do now, for it soon became known that Newt had married Mrs. Goss, and of course it was bigamy. But time went on, and Mrs. Newt, the original, never disturbed him.

"About five years after the marriage, Mr. Newt died, and left a pair of widows. Nothing ever having been heard of the first Mrs. Newt, the other one—the Goss Newt, as everybody called her—thought she was in clover, for the property was very large. She was a large, handsome woman, and used to dress so richly that she looked like a [illegible].

"But one fine day who should turn up, again at Turkey Neck, but Mrs. Newt the first, with a Philadelphia lawyer at her heels, and then folks knew it was all up with the Goss Newt. So it was. The original Mrs. Newt got possession of her late husband's property, for herself and son, and of course the Goss Newt was turned out of house and home.

"Well, sir, what do you suppose that woman did when she found she had been ousted from her clover patch? Did she sit down and cry? Did she go back to her old home? Not she; she just brought suit against the first wife for services rendered to her first husband as housekeeper, laying her figure at two thousand dollars per annum!

"The jury thought that was a pretty high rate of salary for housekeeper, but at the same time they didn't want to oust her out of her pay for services performed. They allowed her at the rate of four dollars per week for the whole term of five years, and mother said it was generally believed her lawyer got the most of that."

"That is a queer sounding story, young man," said Mr. Smith, "but I happen to know myself that it is a true one. Curious cases get into the courts sometimes."

And now, the curiosity to hear about the man who married a man became general, and Mr. Smith proceeded to gratify it.

"The man who married a man," said he, "was a minister; he married a man—to a woman."

It is not scientifically correct to speak of "the eternal hills." Mountains like nations have their rise and fall. In Mexico there is a high mountain which sprang from the plains in a few months, and we occasionally hear of new islands, which are but mountains in the sea, thrusting their heads above the waves. According to a Madrid paper Spain and France are in process of becoming geographically one by the sinking of the Pyrenees. Scientific researches have established the fact that in the last twenty years they have lost twenty metres in altitude. Supposing the depression to continue, after the lapse of one thousand years, the chain that separates Spain from France will disappear altogether, in which case the Ebro will fall into the Bay of Biscay instead of emptying itself into the Mediterranean.
